We welcome everyone, but priority is given to children from the surrounding neighborhoods and those who may find it financially difficult to register for fee based art classes. Professional artists and students from MSU’s Residential College of Arts and Humanities, and Reach staff will work with youth to discover, share, and re-present aspects of themselves and their home places through painting, photography, printmaking, and poetry. Participants will be encouraged to develop hands on skills in art media as well as planning and project completion. Priority is given to teens from surrounding neighborhoods or with referrals from a teacher, counselor or case worker.
